

DC MOORE GALLERY

From the Studio:

Duane Michals

Over the coming weeks, we will be providing inside views into how our artists continue their practices to create new works of art, while sharing perspectives of their current, everyday lives. We are excited to welcome your thoughts about these features, as this initiative will bring together our friends, families and colleagues. Please follow us at our gallery's Instagram or email us with questions or comments.

From Duane Michals:

At the beginning of the shutdown, there was an article about my 1964 series Empty New York, when once I had loved the novelty of the early morning in New York, empty of activity. And now, 56 years later, I am amazed at how fast the city shut down. It has certainly been a time for introspection.

I've been working on short films, about one minute each, that are about the virus, compiled into one sequence The Corona Follies. The idea for these films began when I recently went to the bank and found a long stick on the sidewalk, so I strutted down the street waving it like a baton, all the way to the window of the bank. This led to my creation of the character of Bozo Boy, as Bozo Boy on Parade.

Still of Duane Michals in Raindrops Falling on My Head from film series The Corona Follies (2020).

I enjoy seeing what my ideas look like in real life, by generating my own energy through the character and working quickly, adapting as I go.

I've always functioned on the principle of less purpose, more fun, and when times are stressful, it's important to find and have fun. And I love it when something unexpected comes up. The best part is the discovery, and responding to and recognizing it. That's what these films have been for me.

I think the more serious you are, the more foolish you have to be, and you have to find ways to giggle.

To Watch The Corona Follies Click Here

Duane Michals on set filming Gypsy Rose Me from film series The Corona Follies (2020). Photo courtesy of Michael Scalisi.

Gypsy Rose Me is a continuation of Bozo Boy on Parade, and a play on Gypsy Rose Lee, who was a burlesque entertainer.

Still of Duane Michals in Heavenly Piece from film series The Corona Follies (2020).

When I am not filming, my studio is my nest. I'm never bored, as I'm surrounded by tons of books I want to read, movies I want to watch, and things I want to write. This is the atmosphere in which I've created 11 sculptures, also new for me, and it's been part of my meditation process.

While working on the sculptures, I've been thinking more about the work of Sonia Delaunay, who I find very interesting, and I think she gets overlooked a lot.

Duane Michals in studio with sculptures. Photo courtesy of Michael Scalisi.

Duane Michals in studio with sculptures. Photo courtesy of Tim Soter.

Duane Michals in studio with sculptures. Photo courtesy of Tim Soter.

While I was doing everything myself for years, more recently I have had a group of people to work with. I call us the 19th street players. They appear in the movies, help make things, and it's quite nice. Even remotely, I like the idea of having a community of people to interact with.

Duane Michals in studio. Photo courtesy of Michael Scalisi.
Artwork: Darren Waterston, Pleasure Realm, 2012. Oil on wood panel, 36 x 36 inches.

For More Information about Duane Michals

Please feel free to follow DC Moore Gallery on:

Instagram

Facebook

Twitter

To Access More From the Studio Announcements:

Eric Aho

Robert Kushner

Claire Sherman

Carrie Moyer

Alexi Worth

Barbara Takenaga

Mark Innerst

Katia Santibañez

Mark Valenti

Mary Frank

D C M O O R E G A L L E R Y

535 West 22nd Street, New York, NY 10011

212 247 2111

info@dcmooregallery.com

DC Moore Gallery is temporarily closed to the public. For all inquiries, please write to info@dcmooregallery.com or leave a message at 212-247-2111.